

Outstanding Woman

Margaret R. Hunter

Margaret's devotion to understanding and working in the field of eating disorders began in the late 1990's-early 2000's. With the support of her co-workers, she began support groups and preventive work that was lacking in the community and went on to become a co-founder of the Meghan's Place Eating Disorder Center. Margaret provides eating disorder services and incorporates art therapy through a specialty license as a Registered Art Therapist. She is a published author of a book about art therapy and eating disorders and co-author of a second to which she contributed a chapter specific to art therapy and eating disorders. Margaret works with a number of community based organizations in the county, volunteering her counseling and art therapy services to those who might not otherwise be able to access this critical support.
