

Outstanding Woman
Sue Richardson

Sue Richardson has been the director of the historic State Theatre for over a decade. She has used this platform to provide a wide variety of programming to not only entertain, but inform and inspire. To this end, she has obtained grant funds to allow students from across the county to access educational programs from math magicians, to Science on the Screen to poetry and creative writing workshops. Sue ensures women's unique stories and all their perspectives are reflected in State Theatre programming. She also supports a number of community nonprofits through events and use of the theater. Sue has been instrumental in the creation and continued support of the WOW fest Women's Film Festival, the only one of its kind in the area. Her understated commitment to women and children in the community is truly remarkable.
